THE MONETARY SITUATION

THE MONETARY SITUATION.

Money continued in light demand, with no appreciable falling off in receipts of currency from the interior. The action of several of the banks in reducing their rate for country deposits will doubtless show a more pronounced effect this week, and bankers are beginning to expect a better demand for funds, as trade reports for the week held out encouragement of this sort, a gradual resumption of business activity being noticed. Money on call representing bankers balances ruled at 1%1½ per cent, with the bulk of the business at the last-named figure. Trust companies quoted 1½ per cent the minimum. In time money there was a fair demand for short periods, but little doing for four and six months. Rates were 2 per cent for sixty days, 2½ per cent for three months, 2½63 per cent for four months and 3 per cent for six months. The demand for commercial paper was good, but the supply of choice offerings was small, quotations ruling at 3½64 per cent for the best names for all periods. In London discount rates showed an easier tendency, although the Bank of England made no change in its minimum rate, while open market rates closed at 2½ per cent for short and long bills, against 2.5-16 the preceding week. Call money was 161½ per cent. The Bank of England gained in the week 1694,614 bullion, and held at the close 157,106,112.

The foreign exchange market was irregular The foreign exchange market was irregular and generally easier, the offering of maturing sixty-day sterling bills in large amounts being the especial influence in the market. The demand for remittance was not heavy, and there were no indications present which led to the belief of higher rates for exchange, while it seemed probable that a further decline might be forced before long by large offerings of security bills in connection with purchases of Northern Pacific and other securities for foreign secount. London discount rates are not likely curity bills in connection with purchases of Northern Pacific and other securities for foreign account. London discount rates are not likely to advance to any material extent, and it is now thought that foreign imports will not increase in any marked degree in expectation of tariff changes by the incoming Administration. For the month of January foreign imports gave a decrease of 15 per cent as compared with January, 1896, and exports an increase of about 4 per cent. A decline in wheat of six cents has caused some speculation as to the effect of a lighter demand from abroad on the exchange market; but it should be observed, that, while wheat exports have fallen off, 7.859.127 bushels of corn were exported in January, against 5,306,349 bushels in January a year ago. The heavy corn crop prevents a material advance in its price, and naturally the exports of it affect the demand for wheat, the result of which has been heavy speculative liquidation in the wheat market. Posted rates for sterling exchange closed the week at $4.85½ and $4.88 for long and short bills respectively. Rates for actual business closed as follows:

THE WEEK IN WALL STREET.

Various factors in the week contributed to an improvement in sentiment in the financial community, although bear operators on the Stock Exchange continued in their fight against higher values and in their efforts to drive outside support from the market. There was no marked increase in activity except in the bond department, but prices at the end of the week were better than a week ago, and the majority of reputable brokers in the Street were disposed to believe that a broader and better market might be expected in the near future. Such conclusions were based upon the more encouraging reports from the commercial agencies, which indicated a gradual improvement in industrial activity, and on the actual developments of the week as directly affecting certain properties. the shares of which are listed upon the Exchange, and, indirectly, all shares of corporate enterprises. The agreement reached by the soft coal roads, the declaration of a dividend on the common stock of the Chiengo, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad Company, and the confirmation by the bondholders of the Atlantic and Pacific purchase by the Atchison were among the favorable developments tending to increase the intrinsic and market values of the companies affected, while a more general foreign interest in the stock market, a continued demand from investors for railroad and Government bonds and the appointment of Lyman J. Gage as the next Secretary of the Treasury were important and highly satisfactory and pleasing incidents, all favorable to increased confidence in the security market and in business in general. At the close of the week and especially yesterday, the bond market developed an expanding tendency, due to local and foreign demand, which advanced prices considerable attention in the week from the bear element, and the condition of the anthracite coal companies was conspicuous in discussion by reason of the bear attention to the shares and the ignorant THE WEEK IN WALL STREET.

heen made, and all agree in their exhibits of losses sustained on account of the depression in the coal trade and in business in general, but expectally in the case of Delaware and Hudson and Lackawanna—the record was remarkably good considering the obstacles against them, both showing more than 5 per cent earned on the stock, which was exceedingly satisfactory in comparison with the majority of railroad companies' earnings in the last year. While Delaware and Hudson lost on coal sales, it made an exceptionally good showing in its railroad business, and it is worth mentioning, that in this particular the company's earnings have increased since 1879 from about $4,750,000, to over $10,000,000 in 1896. As to the issue of $1,000,000 New-York and Canada bonds in the year, which was criticised as "capitalizing a deficit." the Delaware and Hudson followed a course strictly within good business lines, recouping itself for advances made to the New-York and Canada on construction and improvement account. Regarding the sale of $,000 shares of Rensselaer and Saratoga stock, it is only necessary to say that it was sold because in the judgment of the managers of the property the large sum of money which it represented could be put sum of money which it represented could be put to good purpose in the operations of the com-pany. The company still holds 8,000 shares of this same stock in its treasury assets, and which by-the-way are not credited among the assets, except at its par value, a fact interesting to note on account of the disposition of some companies to lay particular stress upon the market value of securities held. The sale of the Renselaer and Saratoga stock was made around 180, and recently the company has received an offer of 180 for the remaining stock in its prosession.

recently the company has received an offer of 180 for the remaining stock in its possession.

From criticisms made of the anthracite coal properties one might think the exhaustion of the coal supply would be a development of the near future. Perhaps the many inquities heard regarding the coal supply of the Delaware and Hudson arise from an article published last year, in which it was stated that twenty-six year, in which it was stated that twenty-six years longer would be the maximum life of the Delaware and Hudson's coal lands. The people who are "best able" to tell about other people's business are not always to be relied upon, and it is reasonable to assume that coal companies, understand the resources of their own panies understand the resources of their own properties better than outsiders, for conclusions based upon authoritative information will generally lead to a better understanding of the subject and give the public a more accurate idea of actual existing conditions. At the present rate of production the D-baware and Hudson Company estimates the life of its coal lands at from sixty to seventy years. This estimate is made upon careful investigation, and is the best basis upon which to discuss the company's cal lands as regards the length of time they can be profitably worked. The ultimate exhaustion of the coal lands need not worry present stock-holders, and in the future there will doubtless be made such provision as is best suited to meet the needs of the company, probably in line with the company's past course in accumulating an actual surplus fund. The conservative and ju-dicious management of Delaware and Hudson has made it an attractive investment for thou-sands of small investors, to say nothing of large holders of securities and despite here within sands or small investors, to say nothing of large holders of securities, and despite bear attacks upon the property its owners may rest assured of a continuation in the future of the good management which has characterized the conduct of the company in the past.
